A Park County guide to successful land stewardship

Park County has spectacular places, open spaces, and some of Wyoming's most productive agricultural lands. Access to vast tracts of public land, pristine wilderness areas, and rural lifestyles make Park County a desirable place to live. Park County's population is growing rapidly, and it is crucial that new community members have the necessary knowledge to care for the people, land, and wildlife that make Park County special.

Purpose

Nobody is born with the knowledge of what it takes to be a good neighbor and steward of this area's many natural resources. The Good Neighbor Guide is a short booklet intended to get community members, new and old, up to speed about what it takes to be a good neighbor in Park County's rural communities.

Outcome

The guide will provide information on various topics— from local history to water, soil, weeds, native plants, living near wildlife and livestock, and fires. It will help people navigate the realities of living in Park County by inviting them to become good stewards of well-managed lands for private and public benefit.

Impact

Thousands of free hard copies will be distributed by community members and entities including chambers, businesses, realtors, local groups, elected officials, etc., and digital booklets will be available on the website.
